"An Inspired Generation"

Welcome to the 2022 YST Awards! The evening is an opportunity to mark 10 years since London 2012 which gave the entire nation such joy and optimism and to look ahead to Birmingham 2022, as well as recognising and thanking all the educators who have given so much to all our young people throughout the pandemic.

The awards will recognise the work of schools who have demonstrated the central role of PE, sport, physical activity and wellbeing in supporting young people's return to school.

Throughout the evening we are delighted to be joined by some very special guests from the world of sport who will inspire us through their journeys from London 2012 to Birmingham 2022.

INTERNATIONAL WINNER

LOUAY ALI KADRO SHATILA REFUGEE CAMP, LEBANON

Louay is a 15 year old Syrian refugee who had to flee war torn Syria to settle in Lebanon. During the pandemic he participated in online youth sport leadership training sessions delivered by YST International to groups of young refugees.

To appreciate Louay's remarkable achievements, it is important to understand the circumstances in which he lives. Set up in 1947 in Beirut as a temporary home for 5000 displaced Palestinians, today Shatila Camp is a slum, home for over 40,000 refugees, half Palestinian and half Syrian and one of the most densely populated areas in the world. It has witnessed war, an infamous massacre and waves of refugees. Living conditions are poor and often dangerous. Streets are narrow and cluttered, housing is cramped, clean water is lacking and power cables are exposed. Access to education is limited, with boys facing child labour and girls early marriage. The catastrophic explosion in Beirut in 2020 led to food shortages and destabilisation of a fragile country where corruption was rife.

YST International provided youth sport leadership training for young people at Shatila. Louay was an enthusiastic participant and quickly developed his coaching, mentoring, entrepreneurial and leadership skills, progressing to become a positive role model for others and a cricket coach himself. Louay and his peers faced multiple challenges in engaging with the programme - frequent breaks in electricity supply and internet connection and translation from English to Arabic. They demonstrated huge resilience and commitment, seeing the training as an opportunity to enhance their education, raise their aspirations and achieve their tremendous potential. Their English improved dramatically and Louay, himself, has presented online to supporters overseas about the positive impact on his life. As a result of Louay's hard work, he is not only inspiring and coaching more young people to play cricket, but also changing long held traditions and attitudes in his community, advocating for better opportunities for girls and supporting social cohesion - he has truly become a young changemaker and activist.

UK WINNER

SUPPORTING GIRLS WITH AUTISM PROJECT

ALFRISTON SCHOOL, BUCKINGHAMSHIRE

A group of pupils at Alfriston School have led the way in the development of the Supporting girls with Autism project. Originating from research around how girls with autistic spectrum conditions (ASC) are often 'flying under the radar' and have been disengaged from the wide offer available to them through school and their communities, the pupils have used the vehicle of Physical Activity and Sport to support peers with ASC find their voice, form friendships and develop the social skills they need to thrive in the school environment and beyond.

The girls have been incredibly supportive the whole school community – demonstrated in welcoming new members to their projects and also showing empathy for one another in school. Even though they are all so different as individuals there are strong friendships continuing to emerge and grow.

Not only are the pupils so incredibly passionate about ensuring there is an accessible, inspiring and meaningful offer for all children and their families, through their PE teacher they also work tirelessly on these core values across the county of Buckinghamshire. Alongside this the school have always generously shared the learnings, insight and practice from their sessions to support other schools from across the country. Very real examples of changemakers in action!

YST's Fundraiser of the Year – Patrick Traylor, Project 52

Over the course of 2022, Patrick Traylor will be taking on 52 events in 52 weeks in support of YST. From the London Marathon, parkruns and ultramarathons to sprint triathlons, adventure tri's and other endurance challenges. Along the way Patrick will be encouraging donations and running fundraising events, working towards his amazing fundraising target of £12,000.

Why Patrick is supporting the Youth Sport Trust?

'The last couple of years have been very unusual and kids have suffered as much as adults, if not more; imagine not being able to hang out with your mates every day! Unfortunately, with the numerous lockdowns, structured sport has been decimated and children's health has suffered due to this. I wanted to raise money for a great charity that would help children return and regain their passion for sport and physical activity. By doing this challenge I hope to inspire others to take on their own physical challenges and potentially be a role model to their families and encourage even more people into sport and physical activity'.

Follow Patrick's challenge blog and race diary.
