LEADERSHIP TRAINING

Youth Sport leadership training is a sport for development programme designed to assist teachers, coaches and community workers to empower young people to lead multi sport festivals and activities. It provides them with the skills and confidence to support safe and inclusive sport for development learning events, which may include gender equality, disability, education, HIV/Aids and health. Training is delivered through a cascade model which supports ongoing sustainability of the programme and development of the young people involved.

Additional training modules to enhance skills include enterprise training, safeguarding and protecting children, recycling for sport and advanced leadership.

BECKWITH INTERNATIONAL LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT (BILD)

A unique example of our leadership work is the Beckwith International Leadership Development (BILD) programme, designed to increase the life chances of young people. By working with government ministries and local institutions, skills and expertise are retained within the country we are working with.

Building upon the programme's success in Ghana and Tanzania, the project expanded to the Caribbean in 2013, and aims to reach 179,400 young people of all abilities within the next four years.

TOP PROGRAMMES

The TOP programmes provide access to quality resources and teaching/coaching materials to support the delivery of high quality and inclusive PE and sport for ALL young people.

Through our training, participants gain the knowledge and understanding about the philosophy and practice of the programme, which can then be integrated into sessions with young people and children in schools and in the wider community.

EVENT AMBASSADOR TRAINING

We have developed an event ambassador training model, which supports and trains a volunteer workforce for sporting events and leaves a lasting legacy in schools, communities and the sporting system of the host country.

// Mentoring makes me feel amazing. I have been lucky enough to break my cycle of poverty and after discovering sport I got involved in the Beckwith International Leadership Development Programme, delivered by Youth Sport Trust International.

I love being a role model in this way and demonstrating to children in my area that having poor parents does not define their goals or their future. //
